Monday Music Memo 16 – 10 July 2023

Today you can enjoy a bit of music that is not played very often. Whenever I hear it, I stop what I am doing, sit back and reflect on life in the Orient as it was in earlier days. The days of "One Thousand and One Night" stories come to mind. That was the Islamic Golden Age.

Well, I do not want to bare my soul any further.
Enjoy.

And for the poets amongst you.

In a Persian Market by Sammy Davis Jr.

When lights are low my thoughts always go
To a far off land 'cross the sea
Amber moon and the sweet perfume
Of the mystic East call to me
In a Persian Market Place
Love and I came face to face
While the temple bells were ringing
Two hearts shared a sweet embrace
Like a dream she soon was gone
But her spell still lingers on
It was in a Persian Market
I found love and lost my heart
Like a dream she soon was gone
But her spell still lingers on
It was in a Persian Market
I found love and lost my heart
I found love and lost my heart.
